THIRTY-SEVENTH REPORT OF THE INSPECTOR
REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN IRELAND.

TO THE
RIGHT HON. GERALD W. BALFOUR, P.C., M.P., &c., &c.,
CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN IRELAND,
DUBLIN CASTLE,
 25th July, 1899.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit to you the Annual Report on the Reformatory and Industrial Schools in Ireland, for the year ending 31st December, 1898.

During that year there were under inspection 6 Reformatory and 71 Industrial Schools.

REFORMATORIES.

There are 6 Reformatory Schools in Ireland—

2	for Roman Catholic Boys.
3	" " Girls.
1	for Protestant Boys.

The 2 schools for Roman Catholic boys are situated at Philipstown, in King's County, and Glencree, County Wicklow, and had under detention respectively at the end of the year 268 and 190. The school for Protestant boys, which is situated at Belfast, had under detention 90.

The schools for Roman Catholic girls are situated at Dublin, Limerick, and Monaghan, and had under detention respectively 24, 22, and 9.

The following table shows the number of children in these schools on the 31st December, 1897, and on the 31st December, 1898:—

—	On 31st December, 1897.			On 31st December, 1898.
	Males.	Fe- males.	Total.	Males.	Fe- males.	Total.
In School,	510	62	571	518	53	571
On Licence,	15	1	16	27	2	29
In Prison,	1	—	1	—	—	—
Absconded—sentence unexpired, .	7	—	7	3	—	3
In School—sentence expired, .	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total,	543	63	606	548	55	603

During the past year 136 were committed to Reformatories. It is satisfactory to be able to report that this shows a decrease of 36 in the number as compared with those committed the previous year.

The health of the inmates in both male and female schools was exceptionally good during the year.

From inspection and examination I am satisfied that the literary and industrial training has been well attended to.

The conduct on the whole has been very satisfactory, very few cases of insubordination or absconding having been recorded.

The disposal in the cases of both boys and girls is very gratifying. Boys are encouraged, as far as possible, to qualify for either the Army or Navy, and many of those who have joined the services, have done credit to themselves and the schools.

St. Conleth's Reformatory for Roman Catholic Boys, Philipstown, King's County.—Average number under detention during the year, 267.

The past year has been a very successful and a most satisfactory one in every respect. The conduct of the boys was excellent; all, without exception, were amenable to discipline, cheerful, happy, and most attentive to their religious duties. Carpentry, shoemaking, tailoring, harness-making, smith-work, baking, gardening, painting, plumbing, and farming are the chief industries in which the boys are engaged, and in all departments they show great aptitude for and love of work. The year 1898 was a record one as regards health. With the exception of one boy who was received in a delicate state, and died notwithstanding the care lavished on him, there was not a serious hospital case during the twelve months.

St. Kevin's Reformatory for Roman Catholic boys, Glencree, Co. Wicklow.—Average number under detention during the year, 181.

The general health of the boys was exceptionally good. The fact that there was no death during the year speaks well for the care bestowed upon the sick and for the sanitary arrangements. The general conduct of the boys was very satisfactory. There were no very serious offences. The boys are docile and cheerful, and during recreation hours enter heartily into the various games provided for them. Carpentry, smith-work, gardening, tailoring, shoemaking, baking, and plumbing are taught. The boys work well at their various trades, and manifest a laudable pride in being able to turn out good and neat work. A number of boys work on the farm, and have many facilities for acquiring a knowledge which will enable them to become hereafter useful farm labourers.

Malone Reformatory for Protestant Boys, Belfast.—Average number under detention during the year, 76.

The boys have enjoyed excellent health. Only one case of absconding occurred during the year, and, on the whole, the general behaviour of the boys has been most satisfactory, and a good tone seems to pervade the school. Carpentry, tailoring, shoemaking, garden and farm work are taught with success. Results have been satisfactory, the percentage of successful cases being most encouraging.

High Park Reformatory for Roman Catholic Girls, Drumcondra, Co. Dublin.—Average number under detention during the year, 28.

With two exceptions, the health of the girls was very good during the year. One girl died of consumption; another, having shown signs of mental derangement, was placed in Richmond Lunatic Asylum, of which Institution she is still an inmate. The children, owing to kind treatment, are bright and happy, and their appearance, after a time, presents a striking contrast to what it was when they first entered the school, utterly neglected as they were. They are well conducted, obedient, contented, and industrious, and a happy homelike spirit prevails amongst them. Needlework of every description is well taught. The girls cut out and make their own clothes. They make kid gloves, and shirts, &c., and supply small orders in other branches of needlework to some of the principal depots in the city. They are taught laundry work, cookery, butter-making, household work, poultry rearing, &c. Each girl is trained in that branch of industry for which she shows the greatest aptitude.

St. Joseph's Reformatory for Roman Catholic Girls, Limerick.—Average number under detention during the year, 27.

The health of the inmates has been very satisfactory, as have also been their conduct and discipline. The girls are taught to make and repair their own clothing and outfits. They knit, embroider, upholster, and make Limerick lace. Housekeeping, domestic economy, butter-making, and laundry work are also taught with good results.

Spark's Lake Reformatory for Roman Catholic Girls, Monaghan.—Average number under detention during the year, 8.

The children are taught needlework, and to make and repair their own clothes. They are also instructed in kitchen, dairy, and laundry work. Their health and general conduct during the year have been good.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

PARENTAL CONTRIBUTION.

The amount received from this source amounted to £1,021 5s. 8d. as compared with £902 in 1897 and £842 in 1896. This marked increase in the amount is due to the greater energy put into the work by those concerned in the collection.

The law relating to parental contributions towards the support of children in Industrial Schools is most unsatisfactory; it is powerless to compel parents to contribute anything towards the support of their children, and if it were only for the moral effect of making them recognise their parental responsibility, I am of opinion that even the smallest contribution should be rigorously enforced, provided it can be proved that they are able to pay it.

No new schools were established during the year, nor was there any increase granted in the number of children entitled to Treasury payment.

During the year the number discharged, transferred, and died was 1,477. Of this number, 761 were sent to employment or service; 370 returned to friends; 32 emigrated; 18 sent to sea; 3 enlisted; 22 specially discharged; 4 committed to Reformatories; 176 transferred to other schools; 68 died; 5 absconders discharged by expiration of sentence; 18 discharged on account of insufficient grounds for detention. On the whole this is a satisfactory record. Most of the children are well placed, so as to enable them to begin their life work under favourable circumstances.

The question of the discharge and placing out on licence of children, in deference to the requests of parents, is one requiring careful consideration, when submitting such for your decision.

When the home surroundings are morally healthy and the wages of the family fairly good and not precarious, I think it but right that the family tie be restored and parental responsibility re-established. Under such circumstances I have no hesitation in recommending the child for licence or discharge.

In other cases, where I know the home influences are bad or even not good, where the work and the wage are precarious, I hesitate to recommend such for discharge, for I have observed that a child whose habits were but half formed and training imperfect, when sent back to a poor and ill-regulated home, is very likely to drift back into his careless ways and turn out a more mischievous member of society than if he was from the beginning allowed to grow up in the environment to which he had become acclimatised. This has been forcibly illustrated by three cases lately brought under my notice.

I am pleased to be able to report that, on my visits to the Industrial Schools during the year, I found the general tone and management much improved. In a great many schools the improvements I suggested in my last report were in operation; in others, they were about to be adopted; and in all, I found Managers willing to fall in with any suggestion that appeared to them likely to be an advantage to their schools.

There having been a perceptible increase in the committal of a more objectionable class of children than have heretofore found their way to the schools, the question of classification must be taken into consideration. Hitherto there has been no occasion for a change, but now that Managers see a likelihood that children of an objectionable character will be brought forward, they are beginning to demand that special provision should be made for them. They consider that contact with such children would contaminate the simple and pure-minded already in their schools. Such conscientious motives on the part of Managers should be respected, and accommodation should be provided for children considered dangerous to the morals of the well-conducted children in the schools.

This is no new feature in the history of Industrial Schools. In 1881 a school was opened at Kilmore, in the neighbourhood of Artane, to which boys committed under the 13th section might be sent. This was done in deference to the objections raised by Managers to receive them. In 1884, on the occasion of the conversion of St. Joseph's Reformatory School for Roman Catholic Girls, Ballinasloe, to an Industrial School, the then Manager entered into an agreement with the Government to admit all Roman Catholic girls committed under section 13 of the Act from any part of Ireland. In 1889, when Upton Reformatory, was changed to an Industrial School, the Manager specially bound himself to admit to his school all Roman Catholic boys committed under section 13 from any part of Ireland.

In 1894, just thirteen years after its establishment, Kilmore was closed. In Ballinasloe, the last case committed under section 13 was in 1893, and Upton at present has but one such case. During the past year 28 children of this class, including those committed under the Industrial Schools Amendment Act, 1880 (children living with persons of bad repute, &c.), were admitted to Industrial Schools, and 13 children under 12 years of age were committed to Reformatories.

From facts like these one must come to the conclusion, either that there are very few children in the country coming within the description in section 13 of the Industrial School Act, or, if they do exist, they are allowed to remain at large.

With regard to the literary and industrial training during the year, I am pleased to say I have noticed a considerable improvement, and a desire on the part of several Managers to adopt views in both branches that are more in harmony with the requirements of recent advances in the system of primary education.

In my last report I had some diffidence in putting forward my views on this subject, and while strongly convinced of their soundness and utility, I had some hesitation in urging their adoption, knowing that they were somewhat at variance with the principles and practice of a system that has been so long in operation in this country. I am pleased to find that what I then advocated in a limited and crude way has now authoritative sanction in the Report recently brought out by the Commissioners on Manual and Practical Instruction in Primary Schools under the Board of National Education in Ireland.

I see no reason why the principles and practices so clearly and cogently advocated in that report should not be adopted in the education of both boys and girls in our Industrial Schools. Managers are not hampered by any hard and fast rules; they have the complete control of their children, and can dispose of their time in whatever way they consider best; while they have exceptional opportunities in such matters as accommodation and appliances, that are wanting in National Schools.

The system I am anxious to introduce, and the merits of which I have discussed with several Managers, is that in which Kindergarten, Manual or Hand and Eye training, and Sloyd are associated with and form part of the school curriculum up to the time the pupil commences technical training in the trade or calling by which he (or she) expects to make a living. Some Managers will not allow that their old-fashioned methods require improvement; others, while constrained to admit the virtues contained in the new Educational Gospel, contend that it would interfere with the time devoted to literary work, and that the change would entail much inconvenience and expense, which they would be slow to undertake.

In the French schools, where Hand-and-Eye training is compulsory, it has been conclusively proved that half the ordinary school time can be given to the training of the hand and eye in elementary schools without lessening the effect of the ordinary instruction, and that, without the training of those organs and bringing them together in their action, we are certainly neglecting that class of culture which to 95 per cent. of the people is of most use to them. "Any work which provides a real training for hand and eye is in the truest sense education."

I have observed when examining Industrial School children that when taken out of the well-beaten track they completely lose their bearing, show little intelligence on the subject-matter in hand, and are painfully deficient in the meaning of words and sentences, and the designation and use of ordinary objects constantly under their observation. As examples of their shortcomings in this regard I may cite a few of the many absurdly amusing answers I got in some of the schools.

In a class of girls—ages from 14 to 16—the word “mail-coach” occurred in a lesson which they were able to read with the greatest fluency. When asked to explain what it was, one said it was “a coach for men”; another said it was a “thrashing machine.” Pointing to a gasaliir over their heads, I asked what it was. The answers I got were, “gas,” “a thing for gas,” &c. Asked what they would do in case of an escape of gas into a room, one said she would run for the fire brigade; another for a policeman; another would “turn off the meter.” Asked what a meter was, “it was a thing for turning off the gas,” “a thing where the gases met,” &c.

Most of the girls were well made up in Geography. One was able to tell the source, course, and termination of the Irrawaddy. She was to be a housemaid, and it occurred to me that if she was able to keep a registry of the quantity of gas consumed, and had a practical knowledge of its properties, it would tend more to comfort and security in her future employer's house than any knowledge she possessed about the great rivers of China and Thibet. The system of teaching hitherto followed I hold to be responsible for the state of things I have described; and some Managers, finding that the requirements of the National Board were too exacting and the results disappointing, have already severed their connection with it, in order to be able to devote more time and attention to the education and training of their girls in a manner that will best fit them for the duties they will be called on to perform when they leave their schools. Girls in schools where gas is the illuminant know nothing of the use and care of lumps, and vice versa. I have urged on Managers the necessity there is for giving their girls thorough practical instruction in the nature and use of these every-day requirements, not only with a view of utility, but as a precautionary measure against possible danger. One Manager has told me of a sad case where one of her girls was suffocated by gas in her bedroom a few days after entering on her first engagement as servant. I have urged that in every subject in which Managers profess to teach the children there should be imparted not only a theoretical but a practical knowledge of it, and each child, after being told how to do a thing, should be made to do that thing. I point out that, in the case of training house servants, the knowledge they pick up in doing the ordinary house-work in the school is not sufficient; that they should get a thorough all-round training on all matters pertaining to the duties of general servant, parlour-maid, and house-maid; that a class should be formed for teaching and intelligently performing such commonplace work as boot-polishing, the cleaning and care of silver, the disposal of house refuse, &c., so that we may not hear reports like the following of young servants; one blacklead her master's tan boots, another commenced her operations on the silver with sandpaper, and a third, thinking that the strainer in the scullery sink was not well adapted for carrying off the rougher debris, provided a freer outlet by means of the poker, with the result that the trap got obstructed, and then had to be repaired, after much expenditure in temper and the usual plumber's bill.

I am pleased to be able to report that I have observed a great improvement in regard to some matters to which I drew attention in my last report, and I take this opportunity of acknowledging the beneficial changes that have already been effected in a great many of the schools for girls and are in process of being carried out in others. I should very much like to mention the names of some of these schools that are doing splendid work at the present time, and have further improvements in contemplation, but I refrain from doing so for many reasons. In my next report I hope to substitute for general remarks on the system, a separate report on each school, showing both its excellencies and shortcomings, so that the public may see the character of the work done and the results obtained in each.

To give some idea of the work and how it is done in most of the girls' schools at the present time, I will quote a few extracts from replies I got to queries concerning Kindergarten, cookery, and shopkeeping.

One Manager says:—"Kindergarten makes the little ones fond of school, as it gives variety of occupation, relieves the tedium of ordinary lessons. It keeps both minds and fingers busy, trains their hands and eyes; and the various materials used serve as so many object lessons to open their minds as to form, colour, &c."

Another says:—"Kindergarten has been taught since the school was withdrawn from the National Board. As far as we can judge for the length of time we have been teaching it, it is a most useful subject and has improved the children very much."

Another says:—"I have found and still find the system to be of the greatest benefit to the children. It develops their intellectual and manual faculties, it gives them habits of accuracy and neatness. In a word I must say the Kindergarten, properly taught, has a more favourable effect not alone on the present, but on the after-life of the child."

Against these encomiums the following is the opinion of one of a small number of Managers:—"We have not the Kindergarten in our school. I look on it as a very useless and expensive matter."

On the subject of cookery, one says:—"The technical teacher, Miss M'Cartie, gives regular lessons in cottage cookery. The children are making rapid advances—some are almost experts."

Another says:—"A kitchen, such as would be in an ordinary tradesman's house, has been provided, where the girls whose terms expire this year have been trained to prepare the food required for a family."

With reference to shopkeeping, one says :—" Book-keeping and a system of shopkeeping, as recommended by the Inspector, have been taught for the past eighteen months. The children know how to buy and sell, as well as to dispose economically of the wages of an ordinary household. They can keep their accounts neatly and calculate small bills mentally."

Another says :—" A shop has been opened, and the children purchase their weekly necessities. Manager thinks it will be a great help to the children hereafter, giving them a knowledge of the value of the different articles."

Another says :—" No attempt has been made to teach shopkeeping, as there is no likelihood that any child here will ever be employed in a shop."

Another says :—" Shopkeeping, as recommended in 1898 Report, would not, in my opinion, be of benefit, or compensate for the time it would take up. Such shopkeeping would look like a mere play or sham to these shrewd girls. When possible we send out the elder girls to real shops."

It is not intended that every girl should be a shopkeeper, no more than that every girl who learns to sew or cook should be a dressmaker or cook ; but to know the value of money, how to make purchases and keep accounts, as well as to be able to make one's own dress or cook one's own dinner, will very much contribute to the comfort and success of the girls in after life, no matter what may be their calling. A shrewd girl may be a clumsy one, and the practice of tying parcels neatly will give deftness to her fingers; weighing and measuring will tend to accuracy of observation; while the keeping of house accounts will make her apply her theoretical knowledge of arithmetic to a useful practical purpose. I look on the practice as a useful extension of Kindergarten in girls' schools, and one in which the play element is to be commended, while the sham need not render it less educational and instructive.

Kindergarten is now taught in all schools specially set apart for the reception of junior boys. I hope soon to see it established in all the senior schools where young boys are received, and extended into Manual or Hand-and-Eye training, so that the lads may have all their faculties highly educated at the time they usually begin the technical training in the trades or occupations by which they hope to get a living.

I was recently in conversation with the Secretary and the Manager of a large boys' school, when the latter requested that the walls of the yard, where the little lads passed a great part of their time, might be cemented, as they could not be kept from picking out the mortar from between the bricks. I enquired of him if Kindergarten was taught in the school. He said not, and that he knew nothing about it. I explained its object and advantages, with the result that a Kindergarten class is about to be established, when it is to be hoped the youthful energy of the school will expend itself in pursuits of a more educational character than that of picking mortar out of walls.

In two of the large schools for boys that I visited I found classes of from thirty to forty engaged in the monotonous and not highly educational occupation of knitting stockings, under the care of their only councillor and friend, a motherly old woman. This constituted their only Hand-and-Eye training for several hours daily, carried on in most of the cases for several years—in one instance I met a lad who spent six years at this work. The greater portion of their time was devoted to literary studies. There is, I am aware, a strong feeling that the literary training should be kept up to a high standard in our Industrial schools. I am of the same opinion, but I hold it can be done on different lines from those heretofore followed. The teaching of Kindergarten, Manual or Hand-and-Eye training, will not alone not retard the progress in literary knowledge, but will produce just the opposite effect. Bearing on this question the following occurs in the Report on Manual and Practical Instruction already referred to:—

“It is felt that even primary education has a scope wider than the teaching of reading, writing, and arithmetic, or even than the development of the intellectual faculties in general, and that some cultivation of manual dexterity for its own sake may fairly claim to be a proper object of every well ordered system of primary education. It is mentioned, too, by writers of authority, that the cultivation of manual dexterity re-acts advantageously upon the intellectual faculties, and is an important aid to their development.”

I hope very soon to see our new Corporate Bodies and County Councils begin to take a more active and practical interest in the Industrial Schools of the county, than was shown by the bodies they replace. The moral disinfection, physical development, and manual and mental education of the poor neglected little waifs of their counties and towns, are surely of as much importance for their consideration, if only from an economic stand point, as are the repairing of roads, planning of sewerage schemes, and carrying out the provisions of the Destructive Insects Act.

With a desire to increase the efficiency of the department, the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have been pleased to sanction the appointment of an Assistant Inspector, and Mr. C. Graham has been appointed to that office. As regards the general work of the department during the year, I am satisfied that it has been carried on as well as could be expected with the limited staff at my disposal.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

JOHN FAGAN, F.R.C.S.
